The EFC Philanthropic Leadership Platforms

Professional development programmes for leaders in philanthropy

As the environments in which philanthropic organisations operate grow increasingly complex, new kinds of leaders with bespoke skills from diverse backgrounds are needed now more than ever.

With the aim of contributing to the professionalisation of the philanthropic sector globally, this peer-led, intercontinental exchange programme enables participants to think across national and cultural boundaries to arrive at common solutions to internationally relevant challenges. Participants build trust in each other, paving the way for meaningful exchange.

Rather than focusing on technical training, the Philanthropic Leadership Platforms (PLPs) offer the time and space to delve deeper into difficult questions about the larger purposes and contexts of philanthropy.

What?

Annual peer-led leadership exchange programmes that:

- Bring together philanthropy practitioners from different global regions
- Give a deep understanding of effective philanthropic leadership
- Explore the drivers of development in global philanthropy

Who?

- 20 philanthropy professionals from two regions
- Geared toward established and emerging leaders in philanthropy

How?

- Each participant paired with a peer from another region
- Intensive exchange of knowledge, experience, creativity and concerns
- Active learning from high-level experts and leaders of institutions in the public, private and voluntary sectors

Where?

- Both online and offline in face-to-face exchanges in Brussels or in partner continents and countries, including China, India, Latin America and Russia

“ The PLP programme was the best training I have attended during my work in philanthropy. Actually, it was more like a life experience which included gaining deep understanding of Chinese philanthropy, becoming friends with colleagues from different countries and sharing experiences in a warm and secure environment. I appreciate the openness of the participants and the commitment of the EFC team which created this mutual learning and sharing experience. I returned with a feeling of gratitude, and I'm hopeful because I met a brilliant group of people who are working to make the world a better place...

Rana Kotan (2018 PLP: China-Europe)

Director of Programs and International Relations, Sabanci Foundation, Turkey

“ I believe that the PLP programme was the most valuable and memorable studying experience I have been fortunate enough to be part of since graduating from university. It was a rare opportunity for me to learn, connect and share with a group of friends from across the world and the philanthropic sector, and a chance to learn more about the history of philanthropy, the similarities and differences of culture in China and Europe, and gain a better understanding for project designing. The programme also gave me a platform to share my values and opinions of philanthropy and inspired me with the sparks of social innovation. I feel extremely lucky I was able to make friends with people who share the same values as me...

Liang Shuang (2019 PLP: China-Europe)

Senior Officer of Fundraising, China Charities Aid Foundation for Children (CCAFC)

“ It was a valuable experience for me to learn how other people in ten more countries work to force philanthropy to strengthen, progress, and to help people on the ground.

Tatiana Burieva (2019 PLP: Russia-Europe) Deputy Director on Development and External Affairs, Arkhangelsk Centre of Social Technologies "Garant", Russia

Content and approach

Content

The programme typically revolves around the themes of social innovation, leadership development and bilateral cooperation between China and Europe. The 2020 exchange will feature the highest-rated modules from previous editions, and the curriculum will be enriched with brand new content. The current edition will specifically focus on the following core leadership skills and techniques for addressing and navigating the unique challenges and opportunities facing philanthropy:

- Change management
- Crisis management
- Impact management
- Agility
- Glocal thinking
- Shared leadership
- Driving social innovation
- Leading partnerships

Peer learning approach – Building a community

As the platform moves from project to real platform with a growing alumni community, the 5th edition has placed the expertise and interests of alumni at the heart of the design process. The online and onsite exchanges include several sessions proposed by alumni, who will play an active role in helping participants to put leadership concepts into practice by drawing on their own experience with the programme.

Using a peer-led format the 5th edition will continue to reflect the motto of “little teaching, lots of learning” with participants being encouraged to make the most of peers and a wider community to co-create a true knowledge and support system.

The programme aims to strengthen the links between Chinese and European foundations, building a network that will last well beyond the programme. Participants are encouraged to keep in touch with each other, and the programme provides opportunities, both online and offline, for alumni to strengthen their connections.

To enhance the sharing experience, you will be paired up throughout the programme with one of your intercontinental peers.
